

Delivery

Introduction to Delivery Man (ver 0.1)

Welcome to South-Eastern Manitoba!

You are a small delivery company, delivering materials from places where they can be found, to places that need them.

For example, New Bothwell produces cheese, and sometimes St. Adolphe might want to buy cheese. You can pick up cheese from wherever you want (Grunthal also produces cheese), so it's up to you to choose where you will pick it up from. If you can pick up what they want and deliver it to them, you get that much money upon delivery.

However, you will notice that there are no roads. You must build your own roads if you want to drive somewhere. Roads cost money, so you will only want to pay for roads if you think it might be profitable to do so.

May the best delivery man win!

Instructions How to Assemble the Game

1. Print everything. Cut everything out and assemble according to instructions.
2. Pages 1 and 2 are the board. You will be drawing with pencil crayon or crayon or coloured pen or marker on these pages, so you will have to print them every time you play a game. Tape them together on the back (so the tape doesn't interfere with drawing roads). Alternatively, you could consider covering with plastic wrap and using markers to draw roads.
3. The Delivery cards and Disaster card get mixed together into the same stack.

Delivery Cards

Each Delivery Card is like a contract, well three contracts actually. You can choose only one contract per card to redeem. If you find your delivery vehicle in a correct place, with the correct material, you may use your Delivery Card to earn that much money. When this happens, return your Delivery Card to the central stack, return your material to the material tray, and take that much money from the bank. Then pick a new Delivery Card.

Disaster Cards

There are some disaster cards mixed in with the delivery cards. If you pick up a disaster card instead of a delivery card, read out loud the disaster. It may apply to everyone. Everyone must comply with the disaster. Once that is done, pick another delivery card (or at least try to).

Delivery Vehicles

Each play gets a delivery vehicle. You start with the pick-up truck, but you can upgrade to a delivery van for ten thousand dollars. If you do this, transfer your material from your pick-up truck to your delivery van and turn your pick-up truck over because you're no longer using it. You can also upgrade a delivery van to a semi truck the same way for ten thousand dollars.

The white squares in the delivery vehicles is where you store material when you pick it up at any place you drive through. The material is returned to the material tray when they get delivered.

The pick-up truck can hold one material and can move a maximum of 5 mile posts.

The delivery man can hold two materials and can move a maximum of 7 mile posts.

The semi truck can hold three materials and can move a maximum of 9 mile posts.

The Map

The map shows the location of various places in South-Eastern Manitoba. Some places are in the trees, the green part. Some places are bigger than others and therefore cost more to build into. There are also some river that cost money to build over. And be careful, they can flood!

Some places produce material, or at least you can find material there. The things they produce are shown in grey icons underneath their name. For example, if Blumenort wants medicine, you can find it in Ste. Anne, only three mile-posts away. You can also get gas and ice cream from Ste. Anne.

The dots on the map are called mile posts.

Money

Does anybody really need explanation on how money works?

To Begin

Each player starts with:

- A pick-up truck (the piece of paper that holds the material)
- A pick-up truck mover for the board.
- $20,000 of cash
- Three delivery cards. (If you find disaster cards at this point, don't use them.)
- A coloured drawing device, such as a pencil crayon, coloured pen, marker, or crayon

You should make sure that your mover is coloured the same colour as your drawing device. If not, colour the mover with your colour so you know it's yours.

You will start building roads from any of the five major cities, so pick where you will start. Place your pick-up truck there.

Building Roads

When it is your turn to build roads, it will cost you money. If you build into a small dot, it will cost you a thousand dollars. If you build into a community with a round dot, it will cost you two thousand dollars. If you build into a place with a square, it will cost you three thousand dollars. If you build into a major city, it will cost you five thousand dollars.

On top of that price, it will also cost you an extra thousand dollars if the place you are building into is in the trees, the green part of the map. (Building from a treed spot to a non-treed spot does not cost any extra.) It will also cost you another three thousand dollars to build over a river. If the river crosses your path multiple times in the span of one dot to the next, you have to build multiple bridges and pay accordingly.

When building roads, add up the cost of all roads and pay the final price to the bank at the end of your road building time.

When you build a road, you must continue from any spot on your road network, so that your road is always connected. (At the beginning of the game, pick a major city to start from.)

Game Play

Roll dice to see who starts, or just pick someone. Play proceeds around the table clock-wise, so when you're done, the player on your left goes next.

When it is your turn, this is what you do:

- Start by building roads. All your roads must be connected—you can't just draw road from anywhere to anywhere. Count the cost and pay that much to the bank.
- Move your delivery vehicle. If you pass through or arrive at a place that produces a material, announce that you are picking it up. Then take that material card and place it into your delivery vehicle, if there is room. You can remove material from your vehicle, back into the material tray, at any time. Each vehicle can move a maximum number of mile posts, 5, 7, or 9.
- You may rent road from any player without asking. Rent is two thousand dollars per turn. Pay the player whose road you rented.
- When you deliver material to a place as shown on your Delivery card, return the delivery card to the stack, collect your money from the bank, and return the material card.
- If you make a delivery and hand in your delivery card, pick up a new one so you always have three.
- If you don't like any of your delivery cards, you may forfeit your turn and hand in all three and pick up three more.

- If you pick up a Disaster card instead of a Delivery card, follow the instructions emmediately.

The Winner

The winner is the first play to amass $100,000 worth of cash AND build your road network into all five major places, the yellow triangles.

Frequently Asked Questions

Are the mile posts actual miles?

No. That would be cool, though.

After I upgrade my vehicle from the pick up truck to the delivery van, can I buy a pick up truck, so I have two vehicles operating at the same time?

Sure, go ahead. On your turn, you can move each of your vehicles the maximum amount. Pick up trucks cost ten thousand dollars, if you have already upgraded yours. But you can't have more than your three vehicles at once.

Is someone allowed to hog all the mile posts going into a town so nobody else can get in?

No, you are not allowed to do this. It's a rule.

What do we do if we run out of materials? Can I just print more?

No. If all the materials are used in other people's vehicles, you can't make more. That's just life.

What do we do if we run out of money? Can I print more?

Sure, print as much as you want. There will never be any inflation, because this isn't real life.

Do I have to repair a bridge immediately?

No, but to win, all five cities must be connected by your road network, and if a flood washed your road out, it's not considered connected.

Why is the game called Delivery Man? Why not Delivery Person? That's sexism!

Because the map is not from South-Eastern Personitoba

Niverville is not actually a city.

That's not a question. It's a statement.

Why are you calling these places cities when they are not actually cities?

Poetic license.

This isn't poetry. It's a game based on real places.

That's not a question. It's a statement.

Grunthal hasn't produced cheese in years. That's not accurate!

It's just a game. It may not be entirely accurate.

The Red River is a lot bigger than the Seine River. That's not accurate!

It's just a game. It may not be entirely accurate.

This game is terrible! I could do a lot better myself.

It's open source, so go ahead. You can find it at <https://github.com/tkoop/DeliveryMan>
